Professional Positions

Director, Center for Evidence-Based Corrections, University of California, Irvine, (July 2009 - Present).

Professor, Criminology, Law and Society, UC Irvine (2005-Present).

Adjunct Senior Behavioral Scientist, RAND Corporation. (August 2005 - Present).

Quality Assurance Coordinator, Infrastructure Safety and Environment Division, RAND Corporation. (August 2004 - July 2005).

Group Manager, Behavioral and Social Sciences Department, RAND Corporation. (March 2004 - July 2005).

Senior Behavioral Scientist, RAND Corporation. (December 1996 - July 2005).

Associate Director for Research, RAND Public Safety and Justice Program, RAND Corporation. (December 1997 - March 2004).

Behavioral Scientist, RAND Corporation. (June 1983 - December 1996).

While at RAND, worked in criminological research. Main area of research was sentencing and corrections with a special emphasis on the design and implementation of randomized and quasi-experimental field experiments in collaboration with state and local justice agencies. Conducted over 20 randomized field experiments across the country.

Research Coordinator, Institute of Government, University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. (March 1980 - February 1983).

Coordinated and supervised a three-year study of the effects of determinate sentencing in North Carolina. Designed the data collection instruments, trained and supervised data collectors, conducted all data management and statistical analyses, and co-authored the two-volume final report.

Research Assistant, The University of North Carolina. (1976 - 1980).

As a graduate student, conducted numerous experimental studies in the area of procedural justice, investigating preferences and perceptions of different adjudicatory procedures. A second area of interest was developmental psychology, which involved projects assessing cognitive development in children.
