UC Irvine Federal Statistical Research Data Center (FSRDC) Conference and Workshop

May 1, 2020

The School of Social Sciences at the University of California-Irvine will be hosting a one-day FSRDC conference and workshop on May 1, 2020. The event will provide an opportunity to learn more about the FSRDC system, connect with current and prospective FSRDC researchers in the region, and hear about ongoing projects in the FSRDC. The event will feature speakers from several disciplines who will discuss their recent work in the FSRDC.

Researchers can RSVP and find out more about the conference at UCI’s FSRDC website:

https://www.ccrdc.uci.edu/

Researchers interested in discussing their own current or planned work at conference (either formally as a presentation or informally over coffee/lunch) may contact UCI’s FSRDC Executive Director, Matthew Freedman, directly at matthew.freedman@uci.edu. The conference will include both formal presentations as well as breakout sessions designed to help prospective researchers learn about FSRDC data and develop proposals. Submissions on any topic (so long as the project makes use of FSRDC data) and from both faculty and graduate students are welcome. Researchers may submit abstracts for formal presentations to Matthew Freedman by email through March 16, 2020; researchers may submit topics for informal discussion by RSVPing through the FSRDC website above though April 24, 2020.

We unfortunately cannot cover travel expenses, but there will be a complimentary continental breakfast and lunch for all attendees.

Funding from UCI’s School of Social Sciences is gratefully acknowledged.
